Men and Women Enthusastic in Their Farewell to Dutch Conductor.

National Symphony Orchestra for last time last night. The popular concert that normally would have been given to-morrow night was advanced forty-eight hours to serve as a farewell for the guest conductor from France the middle of the summer and go to her country place in Lenox, Mass.

WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Dr. May R. Keller were the guests entertained informally at luncheon yesterday by Mrs. Harold Allen at her home. The four are all members of the Pl Bets Phi Sorority. Mrs. Coolidge representing Vermont University; Mrs. Wiley, George Washington University; Mrs. Wiley, George Washington University; Dr. Keller, Goucher College, and Mrs. At the end of the concert the lights were lowered, but many enthusiasts revained and trooped onto the stage. Men took the leader's hands and clapped in on the back, while some of the men kissed him.

women kissed him.

Mr. Mengelberg was greeted by proinged applause when he first appeared, the orchestra rising. In fact, the musicians were on their feet about haif of the time all evening.

The programme was the same, with one exception, as that announced for Sunday. Instead of Salome's Dance from "Salome," by Strauss, the same composer's symphonic poem, "Death and Transfiguration," was given. The other numbers were Bach's E minor suite, Liszt's "Les Preludes," Wagner's "Lohengrin" prelude and the "Tannhaeuser" overture.

firlling in its sonority and superb color. In the Bach music the leader both conthe Bach music the leader both con-acted and played a plano transformed represent a harpsichord, as he had one before. After the close of "Les reludes" loads of flowers were passed to the conductor. The Holland-merica Society sent many of them, verybody stood up. The conductor aved to orchestra, to audience. The emonstration kept up a long time.

tration was revived with fresh strength and enthusiasm. The orchestra gave he leader a fanfare. He came out peraps twenty times to bow. More flowers, hen in an excess of emotion the Dutch ader kissed and embraced Scipione uidl, his concert master. More recalls. "I thank you heartly for myself and iso for the National Symphony Orchestra. I will not say road-by, but an iso for the National Symphony Orchestra. I will not say good-by, but au wolr, "the conductor finally said.

More applause. More uprisings, and corchestra played "The Star-Spangled unner." Then came tre farewell kisstrated in the stage.

Lawrence Antiques

Mr. Lawrence, before becoming a dealer in antiques, was an architect and collector himself, and managed, when entering business to give his shop an exceptional character that was quickly recognized. With the education of an artist it was natural for him to seek pieces in which the decorative qualities were predominant, so that his collection made an equal appeal to the eye and to the mind.

The feature of the exhibition is the continuous continuous and the exhibition is the continuous continuous and president and permatorial and permatorial and presidential managuration, except the inauguration, except the inauguration, except the inauguration of President Harding.

coat of arms of Lord Strangford on heach piece. A curious case of association interest is a Chinese Lowestoft bowl of decorated with a scene of government buildings, and this is accompanied by the eighteenth century painting from which the Chinese artists copied the scene. Another eighteenth century bowl bears the legend, "Prosperation to the Corporation," which was the best the Corporation," which was the best the Chinese painter could do with the word "prosperity." The collection is replete, in fact, with specimens dear to collectors it that illustrate all the various factors that went toward the making of this historic ware.
